

Chigasaki Breeze

Truly great friends are hard to find, difficult to leave, and impossible to forget.

From the IAC Chairman to Readers

Dear Readers,

I feel highly honored and grateful to be able to announce that our organization, the International Association of Chigasaki (IAC) will publish the first English newspaper in the city on October 1, 2005

As a communication medium for foreign residents here in Chigasaki, it will be issued every other month providing necessary information on the city's administrative activities as well as its culture, economy, events and on-going topics. It is also intended to offer an opportunity for foreign residents to communicate with local people.

We are hopeful that foreign residents can make use of this medium as a place to develop a better understanding through communication exchanges and we can be responsive to their needs.

Working together with readers, we look forward to making Chigasaki Breeze a better communication medium that will foster positive exchange and help foreign residents live in this lovely city Chigasaki in peace and comfort.

Best wishes,

Yutaka Shimada
Chairman of IAC

Eboshi-Iwa Rock took a trip to Space!

Do you know the space-famous symbol of Chigasaki?

It is Eboshi-Iwa rock which recently traveled through space with successfully-returned shuttle "Discovery". The crew members including a Japanese, Soichi Noguchi, wore the emblem designing Eboshi-Iwa on their breast. He grew up in Chigasaki and went to schools in the city. He had a dream to become an astronaut ever since he was a small boy and he really made it come true.

" It may take a long time to fulfill your dream, but never give it up."

Soichi Noguchi

A letter from a teaching staff member of Int'l Education Program

Family, Health, Education and Culture exchange are the basics for a Nation Development. The volunteer work that the IAC members in Chigasaki city are doing is planting the seeds to make Japanese students more self-confident and open-minded. Knowing more about other country's cultures will make them stronger and appreciate more what their ancestors did to build a new Japan. Meeting natives of different places, languages and systems, and learning directly from them is the best and fastest way to answer questions difficult to find in a book. I congratulate and encourage IAC to continue working on this international culture exchanges and to invite other volunteer groups to do so, all around Japan. It is a special honor and pleasant experience for me to be of some help in your wonderful project. Thank you so much for this opportunity. Keep on it!

Lidia San Martin de Yoneyama, Peru

Chigasaki would be a nice place to visit!

IAC is accepting groups of teachers from the developing countries in the world almost every year. They travel from Osaka to Tokyo spending about a month and stop by Chigasaki to learn what primary and middle schools are doing. This arrangement has been very well accepted and it's done consecutively. Meanwhile, their visit offers a good opportunity eventually for school boys and girls to learn about the visitors' countries. Also, groups of university students from France and Australia really enjoy home-staying in Chigasaki, though it's rather a short one. They visit Chigasaki every year because they like it here so much.

Introduction of Chigasaki

【Geography】

Chigasaki is located in the center of Kanagawa Prefecture and is in an area called Shonan. The coastline from Hayama to Chigasaki is well known as one of most beautiful beaches in Japan. From the Chigasaki beach, better known now as Southern Beach, you can see Eboshi-iwa rocks about 1.5 km offshore toward south. The rocks have a shape just like a headgear Eboshi worn by high ranking people in the Heian period and it was so named. Eboshi-iwa is a symbol of Chigasaki. Not only beaches, but there also are green hills back in the northern part of the city.

【History】

The history of Chigasaki dates back to about 15,000 BC. There are remains such as ancient tombs and Kaizuka. It is known that the ancient tombs were built about 14,000 years ago, while "Kaizuka" is a shell-mound or kitchen middens formed about 3,500 years ago. Chigasaki's geographical proximity to the city like Tokyo and Yokohama, and the mildness of its climate attracted many wealthy people to build their second houses in the Meiji period. In the meantime, Chigasaki developed to be a bedroom town too and its population increased year after year. Many tourists visit its beaches every year.

【Festivals】

Major events in Chigasaki:

- ① Ooka-Echizen festival is performed in memory of Ooka-Echizen Tadasuke, a powerful magistrate in the Tokugawa Shogunate. He is famous historically for his fair judgement. The Ooka family had its territory in Chigasaki in the Edo period. The festival is held in April every year spending two days and it includes a big parade, performances, bazaars, etc.
- ② Shonan festival is an event held in early summer on the beach for citizens to freely participate and have a lot of fun. There are garage sales, beach soccer games, and other performances for you to enjoy and at the Aloha market, you can get Hawaiian foods, drinks, clothes, and listen to Hawaiian music.
- ③ Hamaori festival is an event where a number of people carry a portable miniature shrine on their shoulders and get into the sea for the purpose of purification of the shrines. About 40 portable miniature shrines are brought in from various areas in Chigasaki and neighboring communities. This spectacular event is held in July and the festival starts at dawn.
- ④ Southern Beach Chigasaki fireworks is displayed in August. It's a big fireworks and many people from other cities also visit to the Southern Beach to enjoy the fireworks. This fireworks display is a major summer event being held in many cities across Japan.

Eboshi-iwa Rock

If you visit Chigasaki Beach on fine days, you will see Enoshima Island in the east, Mt. Fuji in the west and a large rock in the south, about 1.5 km off the beach. The rock is a part of the reef called Ubajima and has a shape of Eboshi; an old headgear worn by nobles in court dress in the Heian period, some 1,000 years ago. That's the reason why it is called Eboshi-iwa rocks.

The beach is now called Southern Beach and the scenery from there is so impressive making the Eboshi-iwa Rocks a symbol of Chigasaki.

Rachien-dori Street

In Chigasaki, there is a street named after a foreigner's name; Mr. R. Ruzten. Rachien-dori is the one. Mr. R. Ruzten who was born in Hanover, Germany came to Japan in 1902 (Meiji 35), as a representative of a German trading house.

Before long, he started doing business by himself of importing German products such as cars, cameras, etc., and he became rich. In 1932 (Showa 7), he bought a land of 49,500 square meters at the present Asahigaoka area and built a villa. He married to a Japanese lady and they treated local people so nicely with deep considerations. Soon later, the street extending from the villa to the seashore of Chigasaki was named the Rachien-dori street by those who were living in the neighborhood. From there people could directly see Eboshi-iwa Rock, a symbol of Chigasaki.

How about enjoying Autumn Colors?

What cherry blossoms are to spring, colorful leaves of red and gold (koyo) are to autumn. The Japanese enjoy viewing them and famous spots draw large numbers of viewers. To enjoy koyo, you might visit Kamakura City. Koyo at the Engakuji Temple, the Kenchouji Temple, the Zuisenji Temple and the Kamakura Hachimangu Shrine are particularly nice from mid-November through mid-December, but it differs from year to year. If you are willing to take a short trip, other famous spots are: Nikko, Hakone, Fuji Five Lakes and Mount Takao (1 hour west of Shinjuku). Mt. Fuji in combination with the lakes and autumn leaves makes a spectacular sight, usually best in late October to early November. Each year, starting in late September, the "koyo front" moves southwards from Hokkaido until it reaches the lower elevations of central and southern Japan in the end of November.
